From making friends in Jumpstart to being a first responder on-campus to guiding students as a residence advisor to playing intramurals, I've organized and participated in various events across campus. Furthermore, I have a background in organizing events for large student bodies since I began high school in 2018, and am now in university with events ranging from orientations to new initiatives. As I've made my way into my second year of university, pursuing health and exercise sciences, I've found that the heartbeat of UBC-O lies within its diverse and engaged student body. Behind every student is a story and a vision and I want to make sure that every student is heard. Currently, the campus consists of plenty of underrepresented groups that deserve to be heard. As VP-Campus Life, my vision is to cultivate an environment of transparency between UBC, the SUO, and the student body and incorporate student input to ensure events and campus life initiatives resonate with the needs of our diverse campus body. I am eager to get the ball rolling on initiatives and events that can help our student body thrive. Together, we can make our time at UBC-O an unforgettable chapter in every student's academic and personal journey.
