Hello! My name is Sheela Wangari Mbogo. I am an IGS masters student specializing in Global Studies. I began my journey with UBC-O in 2019 joining their Undergraduate PPE program and minoring in English graduating the summer of 2023. I chose to come back to this campus for my master's because of the great support I received starting out. Now I would like to give that back. I am passionate in areas of social justice movements, decolonization (with my focus being the African region) and critical theories of race and feminism. I am particularly interested in evaluating political and economic systems to better understand what changes are necessary if we are to make movement to an inclusive and intersectional world. As a university student I want to try my best in my time here to helping our university make the proper steps into such a future and to inspire other students to aim for the same thing!
